WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 4.—Washington entertains to-day 100,000 strangers. They began to come before the dedication of the monument, and they have been coming all day and all night ever since. They have come in family parties, in clubs and in companies and regiments. The hotels were filled a week ago, and private boarding houses and dwellings have since done what they could to lodge the shelterless and feed the hungry. Nevertheless not a few of later comers, who brought little besides their patriotic memories and excellent hopes, tramped the avenues last night from necessity, and breakfasted this morning with coffee and sandwich vendors of the markets and street corners.

The morning opened hazy, but with excellent promise of fair weather, which was fulfilled before 9 o'clock. The throngs were abroad early, walking or riding from point to point to see what they could of the public buildings, parks, statues and monuments before the great event of the day began. Firing and drumming and marching of clubs and troops were enlivening elements of the early festooning, while the morning ceremonies tendered to the popular political favorites served to amuse and interest the participants and immense crowd. Whatever it is possible to do with scintillating and boards, and bunting and gilt to bedeck a town for an occasion like this Washington has undertaken and performed.

THE HARVEST OF DECORATIONS
and carpenters began ten days ago, and the sound of their sawing and pounding and click of their hammers has been heard almost since dawn. Since dawn the main part of the making of the decorations. At first only a few rough timber beams and all along the proposed line of the march from the white house to the capitol, concealing doors and windows of stores and dwellings, and filling up the little parks and openings and upon these were tacked advertisements of artists to rent. Later flags, banners, streamers and tasteful devices in showing colors concealed the rough wood work, and then building fronts began to blossom out. The completed work is very beautiful and the stately of American avenues has been transferred into a moving mass of which fittingly typifies the heartiness of this city's welcome to the new administration.

The building at the corner of Twelfth and Pennsylvania avenue, occupied by the pension bureau, was perhaps the most elaborately decorated structure in the city and the decorations were at once pleasing and unique. Long lines of streamers were suspended between the flag-staffs on the roof. Just below on either side of the building are immense

GOLDEN EAGLES

and framing the whole design were handsome shields bearing the names of the states of the union all linked together with gilt chains.

At the second story streaming staffs bore graceful tri-colored standards with the names of the vice presidents of the United States. The west front of the building represented the legislative branch of the government. A mammoth picture of the capitol was flanked by a great "Roman fances," and above all colossal heralds sounded "patente."

At the corner of the building the GODDRESS OF LIBERTY armed with sword and shield represented the executive branch of the government. A national shield surmounted the figure and an excellent oil portrait of life-size of the was suspended above a shade bearing the name of the state of New York. On the south face of the building, Justice, blindfolded with sword and scales, represented the judiciary. Altogether the effect was very pleasing.

The hotels were tastefully decorated. The Willard was profusely draped in graceful festoons of gaily colored fabrics.

WORDS OF WELCOME
marked in tinsel, above an immense blazing star at the doorway, and a great arch of gas jets spanned a circle enclosing symbols of the head of the American club, of Philadelphia. Electrically lighted, the building's entrance was brilliantly transformed the dark face of the Metropolitan into a thing of beauty. The Abbott house was fairly and personating figures, and other hotels showed great ingenuity in devising pleasing and original decorations. A floral ladder, reaching to the roof of a business house on Pennsylvania avenue bore upon its range the words "Sheriff, Mayor, Governor, President," thus graphically symbolizing of the president elect. All the government buildings on the line of march were gay with bunting. Large American flags encompassed the gray columns of the treasury and long lines of pennants of every hue of the rainbow ran across the granite front of the great building and relieved the severe architecture by giving it an appearance in keeping with the gala day. Handsome rosettes and designs in particular bunting adorned the state war and navy department buildings.

COVERED WITH FLAGS

Just before the hour set for movement of the procession the music of leading organizations seeking their post blended in one confused roar. Every where the shrill note of the life and of the battle drum was heard. By 10 o'clock the entire population of the city seemed to have left their homes, and occupied the streets on line of march. The crowd was something unprecedented even in this city accustomed to receive the visits of the nation's population. Men, women and children pushed and elbowed in the vast throng, yet it was a good natured crowd, and evidently disposed to do justice to the occasion.

It was swelling and anxious to be amused and plucked fun from the night incident; as, for instance, when an unhappy-looking man passed up the avenue in his shirt sleeves, pushing a wheelbarrow, in which reclined with self-satisfaction a man bearing a flag. All sorts of jokes greeted the equipage on its travels. A large crowd congregated around the White House and another equally as large around the entrance to the Arlington at an early hour this morning for the purpose of obtaining a sight of the president and the president-elect as they took the places assigned them in the line. Both gentlemen rigidly denied themselves to visitors during the morning. The members of the general inauguration committee met at the Arlington hotel before ten o'clock and placed their services at the disposal of the president-elect.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR
breakfasted with his family at the White House about 9 o'clock. No one was admitted to the house to disturb his privacy except Senators Sherman, Ransom and Hawley, of the senate committee of arrangements. They had a short interview with the president, and then Senator Hawley left and proceeded towards Willard's hotel, where he was joined by the vice-president-elect, Hendricks, and the two proceeded to the White House. They occupied a handsome open barouche, lined with crimson satin, and drawn by four white horses. The vice-president was heartily cheered all along the short road to the White House. Just as he was entering the grounds, President Arthur's carriage, containing Senators Sherman and Ransom, started to Arlington for the president-elect. This carriage was also an open barouche, drawn by four spanking bays from the president's stables, which were covered with soft, heavy black and white buffalo robes. The senate committee were ushered into the presence of the president-elect immediately on their arrival at the hotel and after a short delay the three gentlemen proceeded at the south entrance of Central hotel and took seats in the carriage and were rapidly driven to where they joined President Arthur and Vice President-elect Hendricks and Senator Hawley and Marshal McMichael of the White House police, and escorted the president-elect into the presence of the president. The president-elect was greeted with cheers and waving handkerchiefs as he drove along Sixteenth street from the hotel. He kept his hat raised in recognition of the compliment. While the party were at the White House the chief marshal of the procession and his aids rode into the grounds and notified the president-elect that the procession was ready to start. It was precisely the hour set, 10:30, that the presidential party entered their carriages and took the position assigned them in the line. The party entered their carriages in the following order: In President Arthur's carriage, President Arthur with President-elect Cleveland on his left, Senator Sherman on the left of President Arthur and Ransom on the right facing the president. In the second carriage the vice president-elect with Senator Hawley on his left. As the carriages drove out of the gates and entered the line, the occupants were greeted with the men shouting, women screaming and waving handkerchiefs, and all seemed carried away with excitement. The president-elect and vice president-elect came in for the principal share of the cheers and each of them raised his hat and bowed right and left to the crowd.

The first division of the procession escorting the president-elect then began its march to the capitol. The scenes on Pennsylvania avenue almost

GAFFLED DESCRIPTION.
A great surging mass held the sidewalks. Above them stately buildings were covered with cloths of gorgeous colors, arranged in patriotic devices. The soft spring like breeze lazily stirred innumerable flags and streamers, and special sides in brilliant uniforms dashed hither and thither, lending action to the scene. The police regulations were perfect and the broad avenue with its hard smooth surface was completely cleared of everything that might obstruct the pageant.

The United States regular troops came first, thus departing somewhat from the order of the program, with the probable object of insuring a clear marching space. Their ranks extended clear across the avenue and presented a most imposing appearance. The United States marine corps, with its magnificent band, followed by artillery battalions, came next. This section of the procession proceeded as far as the south front of the treasury department and then halted to prepare to parade and rest, in order to afford an opportunity for the presidential party to file in line. When the march was resumed the president's elegant carriage was preceded by Gen. Stocum, the chief marshal, and his staff and a troop of United States cavalry. Surrounding the carriages were a dozen mounted policemen. The party received an ovation along the line of march. Men cheered, women waved their handkerchiefs and slapped their hands and the greatest enthusiasm was evinced by the immense crowd. President-elect Cleveland kept his hat in his hand and bowed to the right and left as the carriage rolled slowly along. The same reception was accorded the vice president-elect, whose carriage followed. Next came the national democratic committee carriages, followed by the district militia, headed by the Washington light infantry. The marching of this organization, with its unusually long front, was almost perfect and it succeeded in making a difficult wheel at the treasury building without breaking, a thing even the United States regulars did not attempt. The local divisions of the Grand Army of the Republic closed the escorting divisions.

Before 9 o'clock fully

had congregated on the broad plaza to the east of the capitol and on the terrace to the west, and the approaches for carriages and pedestrians were blocked with strangers going to and from the great structure. On the streets north of the building many companies and societies were formed and preparing to march to the center of the city.

HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE who had passed the night in Baltimore and who had arrived on the early morning trains crowded the thoroughfares. Members of political organizations who had found quarters for the previous night in the smaller hotels in the vicinity of the capitol, stood gossiping on the subject of the day. Their conspicuous high hats and overcoats of light or dark material and gaudy badges were objects of curiosity. An occasional number design ornamented the head covering. Many of the strangers had been unable to find a resting place, and the wheels and their faces and clothes were covered with dust and dirt. Many of them carried carpet sacks or valises in their hands while a few had their visiting clothes on and a good suit in a hand-box. Talkative individuals related their experiences of

heard a long as Rip Van Winkle, entertained many with his account of the burning of the capitol by the British in 1812. He said he was 92 years old, and was one of the "first families of Virginia." "Little did I think," he remarked, "then I saw that building burning, that I would live to see Grover Cleveland inaugurated in 1885." On the east steps, at the house side of the capitol, 300 or 400 people had settled themselves. A few of the early birds had reserved choice positions at park street, and had held them with chairs when they had brought from their own homes.

The western terrace was crowded with spectators, looking upon Pennsylvania avenue, along which the procession was to move. That thoroughfare was filled almost from curb to curb with moving humanity. Policemen who stood at the entrance through which persons were to be admitted to the capitol were vigorously engaged in moving from the doorway hundreds who had congregated along them. At the basement entrance to the east front of the senate wing, both men and women were using their argumentative powers to influence the officers, but without any apparent success. Through this entrance the senators gained admission.

"Let the senator in," shouted a large sized officer present as he gave a dozen or more men and women a vigorous shove. Senator Cameron, of Wisconsin, was the party to enter. He was wedged through and succeeded in aiding a half dozen ladies who accompanied him in gaining admittance. "Let the senator in," again shouted the officer, and Senator Tugger's slight form was squeezed between two men almost as closely united as the Siamese twins. The few ladies who accompanied him were added in. Thus by hard fighting the belated senators forced an entrance.

society from New York, was one of the organizations on the grounds. As the Tannery society attired in aboriginal costumes entered the plaza, he was accosted by "Ugh! Ugh!" and other characteristic expressions. Civic and military organizations preceded by single a drummer boy or by a band of 100 pipes as the case might be followed and took the positions assigned. The sun shone brilliantly on the uniforms of the troops, and their bayonets gleamed in the sunshine like a sea of burnished steel. At 11 o'clock the crowd had increased to 60,000 or 70,000, and crowded the plaza.

Twenty minutes later the president's carriage, with a few horses, fairly pruned the west and piazza proper and on its arrival the people stood on masses over the east front. Policemen on horse rode among them and with shouts and clubs cleared a passage way. The carriage began to move through the passage way, preceded by the military.

The Daily Sentinel.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4, 1886.

THE CITY.

Dr. Dilla is moving into his new residence, corner East Berry and Lafayette streets, to-day.

Traffic on South Calhoun street was blocked for ten minutes by a freight train this morning.

The photographs of young Petokey bear a most striking resemblance to Master Bennie Woodward.

Petokey, the Indian boy wonder, and the President Cleveland grand march at the Academy of Music last night.

The soldiers were paid their quarterly pensions to-day by the representative of the state agency who comes here for that purpose.

Miss Ella Wolfe, quite a charming young lady, will be married shortly to a commercial salesman who frequently comes here.

The annual county teachers' institute is being discussed, and some opposition is manifested. The gathering is always productive of good.

A polo club is to be organized here. Frank Lightfoot will captain the team and train his men for admission into the western polo league.

Peter Klummauer, Col. George Ortolob's partner, was arrayed in a white tunic, and decorated with flags and other emblems of victory to-day.

There will be Lenten services at the Cathedral to-night. Very Rev. Father Brammer will deliver the first of a series of sermons on the life of the Saviour.

Jim Wilkinson, the genial proprietor of the Heekin house, objects to having his hotel advertised in connection with unfortunate females who chance to stop there.

The discharge papers of Private Chas. P. Vane of the Seventh Battery of Indiana Light Artillery were found on the Nickel Plate track east of this city by O. L. Perry this morning.

The News claims that Messrs. Cooper, Lambert and Dilline were applicants for the city editorship of that paper. Mr. Shober was our informant and Tim Sentinel so stated at the time.

Wild ducks are now shot in the river about town. The prairie swans west and south of this city are favorite resorts for the pump game and a big party of hunters led by John Kline went out to-day.

Henry Hubbard has been permitted to build a one story house on lot 24, Jones addition, to cost $400, and Wm. Vanght will put up a one and a half story frame house on lot 1, Jones' addition, at a cost of $500.

The indications for the lower lake region, as reported by the weather bureau at Washington to Tim Sentinel, are as follows: Local rain or snow, followed by slightly colder, fair weather, westerly winds, rising barometer.

Miss Carrie Well, daughter of Mr. Isaac Well of this city, will be married to Leopold Loewer, a prominent and prosperous young business man of Ligonier, Ind., on the 20th inst. The service will be at the Jewish Temple at 630 p. m.

H. J. Redlich, the bankrupt boot and shoe dealer, has leased the store room at 10 Calhoun street and will locate here permanently. The gentleman is enterprising and Tim Sentinel is pleased to note their determination to be of us.

The recent changes on the Wabash have practically dropped R. M. Hawley, late tramman, out. John McKenna, master mechanic, is the only official of the old I. P. & O. now in the employ of the company, and he is reported to be on the ragged edge.

W. A. Fogus last night attended a rehearsal of Spiegler's band with a view of engaging the musicians to play at the "Triumphant." The roller skating is now and but few hands can play music it is possible or pleasant to glide after. This criticism includes them all.

Joseph F. Beegan returned yesterday from Indianapolis, where he was before the United States civil service commission for examination for a position in the law department at Washington. It is safe to say that Mr. Beegan passed the examination, having answered correctly 145 out of 150 questions asked.

Bill Ernestine settled a novel wager yesterday. Frank Hako offered him an 8-gallon keg of beer if he carried it on his shoulder from the Prince's saloon, in Bloomington, to the Bass laundry. Yesterday Mr. Ernestine shouldered the keg and landed it at the laundry, where it was tapped and dispensed to the thrifty.

The management of the New Orleans exhibition is indebted to a number of Port Wayne people for premiums and services. The Electric Light Company has just received a penny for illumination of the exhibition.

The stockholders of the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad met at Grand Rapids this morning. Thirteen directors were chosen and they select officers.

There was submitted to the stockholders for meeting an agreement for the construction of Grand Rapids, Indiana and Chicago railroad company with the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad company.

Driscoll's hall is to be converted into a skating rink, and the south end bellies will whirl there.

The Wabash pay car did not come to-day, and is promised to-morrow, but may not come until Friday.

The Remmel block on Broadway has finally passed into the hands of George P. Bissell & Co., the eastern money kings.

Judge Chapin's new residence on Douglas avenue is nearing completion. The house is on the cottage plan and is quite handsome.

M. L. Hageman, formerly of the Hooking Valley Coal company, is now employed by the Adams Express company at the depot.

Some chad on the flag rope on the Hickory pole on South Calhoun street last night. The twine was coiled to-day and the national emblem waves.

J. O. Holloper is in the city. Mr. Holloper has sold his skating rink at Huntington and will travel for a Richmond manufactory, in which he is interested.

There was no police court this morning. Officer Orms had night arrested a couple of youths who were doing the town in female attire. Chief Dietl let them go.

Rev. O. W. Lynch, presiding elder, will preach at the Simpson M. E. church this evening at 7:30. An invitation is extended to the public to listen to the discourse.

Janie Price, who resides at the residence of Max Rindler, informs us that the item about her in the different city papers has proven false in every particular.

Tramps come to us with the balmy spring and acting Mayor Ryan sent a vagrant to jail yesterday. The officers will deal harshly with the ragged gentry this year.

Carpenters are at work on the timbers for E. Bush & Co.'s grain elevator to go up on the basin property at the intersection of Harrison street and the Nickel Plate road.

The Consolidated Safety Valve company have used Ernest E. Kunkle, of this city, in the United States court at Indianapolis, for infringement on their steam valve.

As soon as the ice leaves the paved streets Superintendent O'Brien will put a big force of men out to scrape them. Mr. O'Brien will see to it that streets and alleys are scrupulously clean this year.

The Indianapolis News says: "Charlie Munson, of Port Wayne, while in the city to-day, said that the democracy of his race is still in favor of free trade and home rule—Allen county cardinal principles."

Trustee Gaffney has finished an inspection of the schools of Wayne township, and reports them in a very flourishing condition. The schools are making much progress and the trustees are proud.

George Hunter, of Terre Haute, says he expects as soon as spring opens to put a spark arrester on one locomotive each for the Nickel Plate, Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, and the St. Louis and Cairo roads.

Supt. John Wilkinson has filed with the county commissioners an inventory of the property in his charge on the county poor farm. Mr. Wilkinson has filed such an inventory every year since his election to the superintendency of the county asylum.

A new skate is exhibited by dealers here. It consists of eleven small rollers enclosed in a bushing, and all made from one hardened steel. By this simple device friction is almost entirely overcome, and the skate is said to run far easier than those now in common use.

The Sentinel to-day gives its readers a magnificent pen picture of the ceremonies attendant on the inauguration of Cleveland and Hendricks. It also gives the president's inaugural address, fresh from his lips, as well as other important events of the gala occasion.

The report came to Tim Sentinel over three telegraph wires and is a model of modern newspaper enterprise.

An important real estate transaction was recorded at Huntington yesterday. A valuable piece of land, known as the Lewis Corner, was purchased at a commissioners sale and substantial structures will go up in the spring. The property has been in controversy for years and Port Wayne capitalists have figured on it. The plot of ground is now divided into five parcels.

Mrs. C. A. Collins, mother of Master Clint Collins, the boy who roller skated who was to appear at the Academy rink this week, writes Trentman & Smith that the report published in Ohio papers that Master Collins had died from injuries received while performing his specialties on the rollers is incorrect and that her son's illness was from natural causes and that he had never sustained injuries of any kind from roller skating.

The young man is rapidly recovering and will soon be able to fill his numerous engagements.

When passenger train No. 45 pulled into Huntington yesterday, James Shale, brakeman on the train, jumped off at the depot. When the train pulled off he did not attempt to get on until the end of the last coach passed him. He then grabbed the railing and swung himself in on the steps, where he struck an iron bar, which caused his foot to slip. He fell on the edge of the platform and rolled on the track, and would have been cut into bits was it not for the fact that he stepped onto the track.

THEIR REWARD.

The Fort Wayne School of Medicine Commencement Exercises—The Graduates.

The sixth annual commencement of the Fort Wayne School of Medicine was held at the circuit court room last evening.

Prayer was offered by Rev. S. Wagonhale, pastor of the English Lutheran church. Hon. Montgomery Hamilton delivered the principal address on part of the faculty. His remarks were pleasing and to the point.

He spoke pertinently of the duties and trials of a young physician, and while not concealing the fact that the earlier efforts must necessarily be a struggle his words were full of encouragement.

The newly pledged physicians are Philip J. Treach, Edward McBurney, Thomas M. Shive, Ulysses Grant Lipson, James B. Funk and Samuel Barine. An honorary degree was conferred upon Adolph Wagonhale and the ad eundem degree upon John S. Sprunt, M. D., Chas. E. Grayston, M. D., and J. D. Rhinick, M. D.

The degrees were conferred by Charles McCallum, president of the board of trustees of the institution. Dr. C. B. Stamen, dean of the faculty, in presenting the diplomas tendered advice to the young men which was based upon the experience of an old and successful practitioner.

Dr. Kent K. Wheelock's valedictory address was a particularly able effort. He is a finished orator as well as an efficient physician.

The music was furnished by Reineke's orchestra.

THE DAY HERE.

Port Wayne Democrats Rejoice Over the Inauguration of Cleveland and Hendricks—The Democrats and President.

Peter Kiser's opinion did not announce the inauguration of Cleveland and Hendricks, as anticipated, but other evidences of the gala event were visible. The national colors waved from a dozen hickory poles and flagstaffs, while many business houses and homes were decorated with bunting and pictures of Grover Cleveland and Thomas A. Hendricks. The Jeffersonian were out in white hats, the irrepressible small boy reconstructed the campaign horn, and altogether the picture is one of jubilation and good feeling, indulged in by democrats and republicans alike. To-night the town will be painted crimson, and in the famous words of Andrew F. Glintung, "Everybody's for Cleveland."
